By ṭ(ḥ)ʿn son of Ysʾlm son of ʿ(ḥ)wdsn son of Mlk and he camped here the year the lineage of ′bgr fled from Sʾdr and (the driving out) of the Jews and so O Bʾlsʾmn [grant] deliverance from misfortune and safety
Apparatus Criticus:

RmNSWQ 191: lḥy bn ys'il bn gḍl bn mlk w ḥl h- dr s'nt....

Commentary:

The inscription runs over five faces of the rock. Comparison with other inscriptions which contain the part of this genealogy after the first name show that the third name must be ʿwdn despite the large and misshapen. The n can be seen on the photograph, just after the ǧ. The interpretation of the passage read as w ḫw'({}) yḥd is suggested tentatively and is not a secure basis for historical speculation! The letter read as the first ʿ has been converted from a b and so has a curved form, while the letter read as the second ʿ looks more like a f, and to read it as ʿ one would have to assume that the prongs of the forks at each end had been joined. The word ḥw'({}) has been explained from the infinitive (ḥawā) of the Arabic verb ḥawā "to become devoid of inhabitants, unoccupied" used of houses or places (Lane 827b). The word gly occurs in two other Safaitic inscriptions (AL Ḥajaj 22 and ABA NS 881). It has been interpreted on the basis of Arabic ǧalā "to emigrate, flee, be dispersed from one’s abode through fear or famine" (Lane 446c). The ʿṣgr may possibly be the people of Edessa which had a series of kings of this name, see Macdonald 2014: 160, n. 7b.

{l'} mʾn bn ḥlf bn ml{k}y w wgm ʾl- khln

By ṯʾn son of Ḥlf son of {Mlky} and he grieved for Khln

Commentary:
The third name is rather uncertain. It is possible that the second letter is a l running into a k. Alternatively, the second letter might be a g with a following short line attached to its curve, in which case the name could be read as mġny. The problem with the latter suggestion is that the other examples of n in the text are dots. It is unclear whether the statement of grieving should be read here or with SAMAS 9.42.1. It is written more carefully than the letters of either SAMAS 9.42.1 or 2.

Commentary:
See Macdonald, Al Mu'azzin & Nehmé 1996: 453-458, where this is number D. The penultimate tribal name was read there as ḏr, but it seems more likely that it is s²r (compare the ḏ before ḏrb and the s² of h- 'bs²y).
At 16 generations, this is one of the longest ḏf genealogies, but see SESP.S 2 and see the family tree in Macdonald, Al Mu'azzin & Nehmé 1996: 455. The same author gave his genealogy in QWs 9.

Commentary:
As in SESP.S 1, the genealogy here has 16 generations but shows a rather distant branch of the tribal genealogy from that in SESP.1. SESP.2–4 are by three brothers. SESP.2–4 demonstrate two of the three methods of marking affiliation to a social group. In SESP 2 this is done by tracing the author’s lineage to the eponymous ancestor of his group, while the authors of SESP.3 and 4 use the expression ʿl ("he of the lineage of") plus the group’s name. These three inscriptions show that the ʿl Kn was a sub-group of the ʿl df.

Although the last letter of the sixth name is much longer than the first and looks like a ʾl, comparison with the other kn genealogies shows that the name must be nʿmn. After the second nʿmn there are six letters which have been scratched over so effectively that it is difficult to work out what they were. For the interpretation of ʿdy see Al-Jallad 2015: 309 and for the interpretation of nqʿt see Al-Jallad 2015: 335.

Commentary:
SESP.5–13 are on the broad, vertical face of a large boulder. This text starts at the top of the vertical face but runs onto an adjacent face and then back onto the vertical face to end up just to the right of the drawing of a camel. The author carved a m before the second name and does not seem to have erased it, but it would produce an impossible name. He also omitted the ṣ² in ms²r and added it below the line.

Provenance:
Unnamed, Al-Suweidah, Syria
At 21.3 km east of Rushayda and at 7.5 km west of بي‘ir al-Ruṣay‘î, the Rushaydah-Zalaf road crosses a small tributary of وادي al-Šām called by the local Bedouins علار al-Γathādir (its confluence with وادي al-Šām is 1.5 km to the north-east). Site SESP S is approximately 200 m north-north-east of site SESP.U on the same (right) bank of علار al-Γathādir. It is a large cairn on top of the promontory (about 10 m above the wadi bed), overlooking the point at which the tributary wadi turns east, approximately 1 km before its confluence with وادي al-Šām. This is site D in Macdonald, Al Mu‘azzin & Nehmé 1996.

Commentary:
SESP.S 5–13 are on the broad, vertical face of a large boulder. This text starts just below the beginning of SESP.S 5 and runs parallel with it down the right-hand side of the face, with the last two letters on the adjoining face. It is not clear whether nqʾ is a different word from the usual nqʾt, or whether the author simply forgot the t. Note that the expression ml’t- ḫwq also occurs in SESP.D 12 and KRS 1015. For an explanation of the phrase see Al-Jallad 2015: 152.

SESP.S 14 and 15 plus a rock drawing are on a narrow face adjacent to that bearing SESP.S 5–13. Given the presence of the personal name ms²ʿr in the genealogies in SESP.S 5, 9, 10, and 12 on the same stone as this text, it seems likely that some at least were members of a family known as the ʾms²ʿr.

Commentary:
In small letters on the same face as 9. There are two erasures, one the letter after zkr and the other the y of the final name which seems to have been corrected to a w.

Provenance:
Unnamed, Al-Suweidah, Syria
At 21.3 km east of Rushayda and at 7.5 km west of Biʾr al-Ruṣayʾi, the Rushaydah-Zalaf road crosses a small tributary of Wādī al-Shām called by the local Bedouins Um m al-Gathādir (its confluence with Wādī al-Shām is 1.5 km to the north-east). SESP.U is 350 m north of the point at which the road crosses the tributary, on the right bank of the wadi which slopes steeply and is between 10 and 15 m high. Commentary:
The word lst is found in another inscription by the same author (Ali inscriptions 67) and in the a third on the same stone (Ali inscriptions 68) in both of which it appears as h–lst, as opposed to ∼ lst here. So it is clear that it is a noun preceded by the definite article (on the different forms of the definite article in Safaitic see Al-Řallad 2015: 16–17) and it is interesting that the same author uses both the ∼ and h– forms. Its occurrence between the author’s patronym and his lineage would suggest that it is a title. The root L-Š-Ṭ is not found in Semitic, but may be derived from Greek ληστής “a bandit, brigand, or pirate”. It is the word Josephus uses of the “brigands” of the Trachonitis (the modern Leǧa’) who were helped by the Nabatean king Obodas III and his minister Sylaeus (see Josephus Jewish Aniquities XVI 271–292). One could speculate that Ḩmlt bn Sʾlm (here and in Ali inscriptions 67), and Ḩmlt bn ṣmn (in Ali inscriptions 68) were bandit leaders who took the Greek label as a title of pride, but there is of course no evidence for this, and we have no Safaitic inscriptions from the Leǧa’. If we are correct in restoring a [w] between ‘mrn ġ–l gʿbr and mlh ġ–l ṭ it would seem probable that the preceding hṭ is in the dual. The diphthong ending marking the dual would not of course been shown in Safaitic orthography.

By (Bṣy) son of Mḥnn and he grieved for Frʾ

Apparatus Criticus:
SJI 9: ṣy for (b)lṣy; ḥ for Frʾ

Commentary:
There are two letters at the beginning of the text which can be seen on the photograph and on Harding’s copy but which are not reproduced in SJI. Bṣy would be a new name but cf. Bṣt in C 1853. Similarly although the ḡ of wgm has been excluded from the photograph it is present on Harding’s original copy but was not reproduced in the copy in SJI. The photograph shows that penultimate letter of the text has a short stroke at right angles to the stem and so should be read ṛ. The final letter is clearly ḫ on both the photgraph and Harding’s copy.

l Frʾ bn frq w ṭzr ḫ-n ṣ²nʾ f ḥ rd[w] flt

By Frʾ son of Frq and kept watch ---- enemies and so O {Rdw} [grant] deliverance

Apparatus Criticus:
SJI: l flḥ bn frd wt----

Commentary:
Most of the text is visible on the photograph with the exception of 3 or 4 letters after ḫ. The verb ṭzr is normally folowed by a direct object so ḫ is unlikely to represent the preposition here and is more probably the beginning of a noun perhaps ḫ = ‘dry fodder’. The ḫ’s and ṭ’s are well differentiated hence SJI’s reading of the first name is untenable.

Winnett emends the second name to ʿnʿm and attributes the spelling in the copy to "copyist's error". Note that Harding's original copy of SIJ 3 also records ʿnʿm (the copy in SIJ has been altered) but here it is clear from the photograph that the original read ʿnʿm. By Ṭṣr son of Bnlḅt son of Mṭr son of Mʾz son of Fdg and he went to get salt and so O Lt [grant] security and deliverance from distress this year.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 37: bn klbt for bn bnlḅt; ‘he journeyed’ for ‘he traded in salt’; bʾs¹ sʾnt ‘the danger of lanceheads’ for bʾs¹ sʾnt ‘distress this year’.

Al-Jallad in press, a, Appendix 4: w mlḥ f h lt s¹lm w fṣyt m- bʾs¹ sʾnt “and Aquarius appeared (rose?) and so O Lt may he be secure and may this year bring deliverance from misfortune”.

Commentary:
All the letters are clear. The verb malaḥ is still used among the Bedouin of ḫarrah for going to buy salt from the villages of the northern Wādí al-Ṣirḥān or those of the Ġabal al-ʿArab (pers. comm.and see Denizeau 1960: 502). The ‘before sʾnt is clear on the photograph and may represent one of the forms of the definite article in Safaitic (see Al-Jallad 2015: 74–76), i.e. “this year”. On the other hand, sʾnt could be the equivalent of Ar. ḫnāt the masūdar of asnata (Lane p. 1440c) both meaning ‘to experience drought’.

l ġmdn b[n] wdʾI

By ġmdn (son of) WdʾI

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 76 reads this with that text as bgmndnrwdʾr

Commentary:
The letter-forms of this text are quite different from those of SIJ 76 (most strikingly ǧ but see also r and l). Winnett reads the first and last letters as b and l respectively but they are simply hooked lʾs. There is no trace of a n after the b and it is tempting to suggest that the author wrote nb for bn. However both the names ġmd and ġmdn are attested, so this can be no more than a hypothesis.

By Ghm son of Fdl son of {Rb'} son of {'rb--}"

Commentary:
The fork of the $h$ is crossed by a line of lighter patina. The letters $r$ $b$ in the last two names are joined by proximity making them look like a $m$. But in both cases the semi-circle of the $b$ protrudes beyond the hooks of the $r$. After the $'t$ the text runs onto a different surface and the letters do not show up well. There seems to be one more letter after the $b$ of the last name.

Commentary:
The passage $bn\ tm\ w\ n\ d\ m$ is on an adjacent face and cannot be seen on the photograph. By ḫl son of Bny son of ʾs¹ son of Šʼd son of (Ys¹mʼl) and O Lt [grant] security (and) rest

Commentary:
As noted by Winnett, the s¹ of Ys¹mʼl is not visible on the photograph, though there is space for it, but was present on Thompson’s (unpublished) copy, though not on Morton’s (published) copy. Since Thompson did not know the Safaitic script (SIJ p. 3) it is unlikely that he would have made an unconscious correction in his copy and it is probable that the s¹ was just visible on the stone even though it does not show up on the photograph. On the photograph the w before rh appears to have no cross-stroke.

_ l ’b bn šb h w h yt’ rw h grm_
By ’b son of Sb h and O Yt’ [grant] relief from a misdeed

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 123: _glm for grm_.

Commentary:
The word _rw h_ here could be related to the Classical Arabic _maṣdar_ of the 1st ( _fa’ala_ ) form verb from the root R-W-H, in the sense of "experiencing relief from grief or sorrow after suffering from it" (Lane p. 1178a and see 1182a). Winnett read the last word as _glm_ comparing Classical Arabic _ǧalmah/ǧulmah_ "the whole (of a thing)". However, this demands a construction which is difficult to explain syntactically. The reading _grm_ is suggested here tentatively (cf. the _r_ in _rw h_) with the meaning of a "misdeed or crime" (cf. Classical Arabic _gurm_ "a sin, a crime, an offence", Lane p. 413a).

WH comm. 1016: b rʿyʾ qbt "within sight of qbt".
Al-Jallad (in press, a): w rdf mwn b rʿyʾ qbt "and he followed [the animals] experiencing much fatigue during the rising of Scorpio"

Commentary:
The text is enclosed in a cartouche. The first name is written vertically and the text then splits with bn * a name running to the left and another bn * name running to the right. The statement of the text is enclosed between these two and the edge of the cartouche. It is impossible to be sure which of these names is that of the father and which of the grandfather. It could even be a joint inscription by two individuals called ḥsʾn with different fathers, though the peculiarities of the letter-forms suggest that it was written by only one person. We have placed the names in the above order simply because ḥsʾn is quite different from the text and it seems likely that it is extraneous to the inscription. We have tentatively taken mw as an alternative form of the more usual my meaning "water" (compare C 1679). We follow Al-Jallad 2016: 102–103 in his interpretation of the phrase b rʿyʾ qbt.

By (Zbd) (son of) (Qdmʾl) (son of) (Zbd) son of (Ḥmy) son of Rbn son of Mnʾl son of Sʾmq

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 131: I zmʾd mqdm sʾm zmʾd bn hm(ʾ) l for I {z}d (b){n} d ((b)){n} d qdm(ʾ) (l) ((b)){n} d (b){n} d bn (b){n} y.

Commentary:
Additions have been made to most of the first fifteen letters of the inscription to make them into other letters and two additional signs have been added before the ʾlām auctoris. The altered text reads lsʾlmʾdmqdmʾzmʾzd. The fourth name has been partially obscured by later hammering and it is not clear whether it too has been altered though one line of the m is appreciably broader than the rest of the letter.

Provenance:
Jathum, unspecified region, unspecified country.

Commentary:
The text must have been carved after SIJ 133 since it is so placed as to avoid it. There is an extraneous vertical line between the ṭ and sʾ of ṭʾrq. The ṭ of the first ḏf has the shape of a capital “Z” but the normal form in the second example.

It is difficult to make any sense of this. On Winnett's copy there is a vertical line crossed by 4 short horizontal strokes with a curve at one end and one end. As can be seen on the photograph, this is scratched very faintly to the left of line 1 and the 7 dots.

Drʾl bn Hdr w ṯʾr ḫʾnʾm ḡʾf

By Drʾl son of Hdr and he found the inscription of {ʾʾnʾm} and (so) he lamented for [him]

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 168: hʾʾnʾm or ḫʾnʾm for ḫʾnʾm; ḡʾf for ḡʾf

Commentary:
The text as copied by Thompson is visible on the photograph as far as ṯʾr but unless it continues on an adjacent face it is difficult to see where he found the last eight letters. SIJ 169 is immediately below this text but the presence of a lām auctoris makes it difficult to take it as the continuation of 168 and anyway Thompson clearly saw something else. The sloping stem of the first letter of ḫʾnʾm suggests that it is anʾ of which the copyist has missed one of the side-strokes.

Commentary:
Although it is not certain it is probable that the letters w'ldtm belong to SIJ 227.1 as proposed by Clark. Their position and the square w which they share with that text support this and Jamme's claim ([MAA XIII p. 23-24) that the form of the m is closer to the forms in SIJ 227 than in 217.1 would be impossible to establish since the letter read as m in the latter is a partial restoration!

By Ns¹ʾ son of Yqm son of Mk son of Zʾkrt

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 252: mlk for <<< mlk; reads 252.1 as a continuation of this text.

Commentary:
The b and the n of the second bn are touching but a second n seems to have been written immediately after it. Contra Winnett's commentary the letters which he reads as the second part of this text (shown in the published copy W 223 on p. 44) are visible on Harding's photograph (shown on SIJ pl. Commentary:
Although Harding’s copy is incomplete it seems certain that this is one text. There is a space on the copy between the ḥ and the y of the 6th name but the family tree under WH 1026 suggests that nothing has been lost and that the name is hy. The final name is clearly wʾb on Harding’s copy of this text and of SIJ 277 278. The second letter is also ʾ in WH 1033 and LP 22. Only in WH 930 and LP 21 does it appear as h. All these texts are known only from copies. Given that 4 of the 6 texts have ʾIt seems probable that the name is wʾb not whb.

SIJ 281:(h-) wr(d) for {wl} {wl}{dl}; mḥrb for gḥrb.

Commentary:
The last letter of the fourth name has been hammered over and looks at first sight like a k. However the projecting straight line may not be part of the original letter and what is left looks like a b, rather than a r. The second word of the statement is exceptionally carelessly written even by the standards of this text. The sign after the y of sʾty cannot be resolved into h-w as in Winnett's reading. It seems to have been written originally as a š and the tops of the verticals have been joined to make what can only be a w. The next letter is also a w though of a quite different shape and the sign after that cannot be a r as read by Winnett and Jamme since it is a simple vertical line with no hooks. The final letter of the word is also doubtful but d seems the most likely reading. It is difficult to read the large ellipse immediately after mrd as a m (compare the m of mrd) and it must be a g. Although sense would seem to demand a h- before sʾlṭn the letter looks more like a k. Finally the š of sʾlṭn lacks one vertical. There are three or four letters some of which are partially obliterated by later hammering in the space between trṣ and sʾty.

Apparatus Criticus:
SadF p. 45: w ḫrš h- s²n’ - wa qaṭi’a daʿābir al-ʿudºw ; mwgd - ġinan/ẓafar

Commentary:
The first letter of ṭrb is clearly m here (cf. SIJ 281). Mwgd could be the equivalent of Ar. mawāǧid (pl. of māǧd) “abundances”. In the Safaitic inscriptions the verb wld is usually used in a transitive sense equivalent to the Ar. II Form meaning “to birth”, i.e. “to help an animal (usually goats) to give birth”. This was clearly an important annual event since far more texts recording birthing are dated than texts any other happenings. Interestingly many of the dates of birthings refer to political events in the settled areas. There are occasional texts where an event is dated by reference to two occurrences but in these cases the formula is always s¹nt kaḍa w kaḍa not s¹nt kaḍa w s¹nt kaḍa. Up to ṭrb the text is carved in large chiselled letters but from ṭrb onwards the letters are much smaller and are lightly incised. This together with the highly unusual

Commentary:
Probably a longer version of the genealogy which occurs in SIJ 681. The first two gaps in the text are the result of the growth of lichen over the face. On the photograph it is impossible to see anything under the first but there would be sufficient room for bn nṣ²w bn Ṿzm' as in SIJ 681 in which the latter is followed by bn 'mr. Immediately after first gap there is what looks like a bn followed by some illegible signs which seem to be those which appear as 'mr on the facsimile in SIJ. From what is visible on the photograph this reading is impossible and it should be noted that on the published facsimile these letters have been misplaced immediately before bn tys²t whereas in fact the second patch of lichen under which there would be room for at least one name intervenes. The third gap is the result of deliberate scratching over.

the shapes of the letters in Harding’s copy have not been accurately represent in SIJ. The first letter of the third name is like the r of ʿṯr except that it has only one “hook”. Corpus of Safaitic inscriptions

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 349: ends at ḥṣy reads f h l sṭlm with 350.

Commentary:
ḥṣy is clear on the photograph. The text introducing the sentence and prayer is immediately after the y of the ḥṣy of this text and some way from the the second name of SIJ 350. It therefore seems more likely that it belongs to this text rather than to 350 with which SIJ reads it.

l sṭ bn qmr bn sṭ bḥ bn ḥfr w nfr mn rm w tsʾwq l- ḥwn - h l- mdbr

By Sṭ son of Qmr son of Sṭ son of ḥfr son of Zhr and he escaped from Rm [the Romans] and he longed for his brothers who were in the inner desert

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 352: qml for qmr; l-ʾḥ wlh "for a brother grieving" for l-ʾḥwn-h. MNH p. 329 and n. 172: on w nfr mn rm - and he escaped from Rm.

Commentary:
The last letter of the second name is clearly a r on the photographs. The spaces between bn and zhr and between the z and the h of zhr are due to holes in the rock. Despite Jamme’s claims to the contrary the f of nfr is absolutely clear on the photograph (A. 1812) used on SIJ Pl. V. Note that ts²wq here is followed by l- rather than the usual ʾl. The lower parts of the strokes of the ḥ have been overscored and the left-hand one has been used as the làm of allāh in the Kufic inscription (Baramki 1964 (BNAS) p. 331 no. 8) below. Similarly the n of ʾḥwn has been lengthened to make the second làm of allāh. The difference in patina-colour between the original n and the extension can be seen on the photograph (A. 1812). The final phrase l- mdbr is curious but cannot be read in any other way. Presumably his brothers were in the inner desert.

By Ṣmgny son of Zbd and he was cross-eyed. So, O Lt, (have) pity

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 353: mfn for mgny; h(n){n} for ḥnn.

Commentary:
The text is written vertically on a rock face and below line 2 there is the beginning of a Kufic graffito not published in Baramki 1964 (BNAS). Comparison of the third letter with the f introducing the prayer shows that the former cannot be a f and must be a ḡ. The n’s of ḥnn are clear on the photograph used for SIJ Pl. V and it is not clear why Winnett marked them as uncertain.

By $s¹\,h{r}$ son of Gyz (son of) Gzy is the horseman

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 363: $(w)$ gzy h mty “and he rewarded the pack animals”

Commentary:
The letter after gyz is not clear on the photograph but does not seem to have a cross-stroke which is presumably why Winnett marked his $w$ as doubtful. It seems more likely that it is a $b{n}$ in which the $b$ and $n$ have been joined as is very common.

By Ṭḥd son of ḫg son of Sʿlb and he was sad

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 425: (d)ḥd for tḥd.

Commentary:
The second letter is a clear t and it is difficult to see how the copyist could have substituted it for a d. On the other hand t and ḫ are occasionally interchanged in Safaitic.

Provenance:

Commentary:
This is almost certainly a Thamduic B text. If it is to be read from right-to-left the penultimate letter is more likely to be a miscopied r (which usually faces backwards in Thamudic B) rather than a l.

By Ḍl’t son of Mnʾl

Commentary:
The photograph shows both that the copy in SIJ is inaccurate and that Winnett’s reading is correct. Both the lām auctoris and the final letter have a slight curve at one end and are clearly l’s and the fourth letter is a clear ‘ not w. The dot shown on the copy at the end of the text is a stray mark.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 516: blqt byhs¹ for blq {h-} ----; reads SIJ 516.1 as the continuation of 516.

Commentary:
The photograph was taken from an oblique angle and so is not entirely clear. The l of {k}hl has a generous curve at one end as do the other l's in the text the sign just before the unreadable letters looks identical to the first letter of the inscriptions and should probably therefore be read h.

The technique of this text is quite different from that of SIJ 516 and there seem no reason to suppose that the two belong together. The ‘ marked with a question mark on the copy in SIJ can be seen to be on the photograph to be a series of small abruptions unconnected with the text.

‘ with a dot in the middle is found from time to time and should be distinguished from the sign of two concentric circles which is an occasional alternative form of ḏ. However if the circle with a dot represents ‘ it seems unlikely that the dot before the final letter can also represent it in the same text and the latter is probably an extraneous mark.

Commentary:
The first two names are more or less clear on the photographs and Winnett’s readings are impossible. The third name seems to consist of 4 letters but it is difficult to read any of them with confidence. See E.M. Smallwood “The Jews under Roman rule” (Leiden 1981) p. 96-97 for a discussion). Note the expression prandokiais too laou toudaiw (“the expectation of the people of the Jews”) in Acts 12.11 is not an equivalent to ‘l Yhd since here it almost certainly refers to ‘the people’ (the crowd as opposed to their leaders as it does in 12.4 to which it refers back.

Commentary:

Note that SIJ 704.1 (the text mentioned in the commentary to SIJ 704 as being too faint to read) is enclosed in the same cartouche with 702 (by this author’s brother) and 704 (the text by his father which he mentions finding). However since the last two letters of 704.1 cross the edge of the cartouche it seems probable that it was originally drawn to enclose 704 and 702 and that 704.1 was squeezed in when the author found the texts.

Apparatus Criticus:

SIJ 779: ‘lwn bn tdr w for ‘n- wn bn thwr; reads SIJ 779.2 as the end of this text.

Commentary:

The restoration of the initial vocative particle seems certain. The ‘ has been split by a crack in the rock but cannot be anything else (cf. bn later in the text). The next letter is no different from the n of bn and so the preposition must be ‘n- “against”. The direction of the r suggests that the w precedes it hence thwr. Commentary:
The first complete letter on the photograph is y and there are traces of a vertical stroke before it. Although this letter is clipped by the edge of the photograph it is clear that the edge of the stone is so close that there would be no room for any letters before this vertical stroke. Thus h rdy or h ny are ruled out as restorations and this stroke can only be the lām auctoris. There is what appears to be a diagonal stroke at the end of the text which does not seem to be a letter. If it is then the last name would be qtn.

On a face adjacent to that bearing SIJ 786-788. Not read by SIJ. This the only Safaitic inscription known so far which mentions the annual migration both to and from the inner desert (on which see Macdonald 1992: 6, and n. 28). By Mrhn son of ʾlb and he stopped at this empty area and he followed the traces ... of the lineage of ʾmrt

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 789: only ḫqṣ read. JSaN p. 48 note 41: l mrhn bnʾqʾl w ḫqṣ ʾbh ḫqṣ.

Commentary:
The surface of the stone has been covered with later scorings and hammerings which have obscured parts of this text which is elegantly written in the semi-square script. B and r are carefully distinguished the former having a square form and the latter being rounded. The circles of the letters ʾ w q š are carefully drawn an this suggests that the fourth letter is probably a h rather than a y despite the fact that the prongs of the fork appear to be joined. Similarly the second letter of the patronym cannot be q as read by Jammē (cf. the large circle of the q of ḫqṣ). Only one letter is obscured after bʾ and while in the context it is probably a d it is impossible to be sure. There are numerous lightly scratched letters on the same face but no coherent reading can be made from the photograph.

I sʾgʾ bn šhb bn rǧd bn ʾhlm h rdy nqmt m- ṭkm (b)n ṭb gr -h w ṭwr ḡ- yʾwr h- sʾfr

By Sʾgʾ son of Šhb son of Rǧd son of ʾhlm O ṭd [grant] revenge on ṭkm son of ṭb his neighbour and blind whoever scratches out the inscription

Apparatus Criticus:
SIJ 825: bʾd for rǧd; rdy for h ṭd y; mn km ḡnt bʾr -h for m- ṭkm (b)n ṭb gr -h; reads ṭwr (d-) (yʾwr)[f] (h) [sʾ][f][fr] as part of SIJ 826 for ṭwr ḡ- yʾwr h- sʾfr.

Commentary:
The entire text is absolutely clear on the photograph. The letters b and r are clearly distinguished so the third name can only be rǧd. The letters ʾl and ḡ in ʾhlm h ṭd y are lightly scratched but their position in relation to the other letters makes it highly probable that they are original. Thompson’s copy omitted the h before ṭd y. The letter following the m after nqmt is clearly a / not a n. A diagonal line has been added to the b of the following bn making it look like a ʾ. SIJ takes the curse as part of 826 but its position and the quite different form of r in 826 make this impossible. The author omitted the ʾwr of yʾwr and squeezed in the ṭ between the ḡ and the following h and added the ṭwr below. The sʾ and the bottom of the r of sʾfr have been hammered over but are still visible on the photograph.

Provenance:
Tell al-ʿAbд, unspecified region, unspecified country.

Commentary:
For b- rʾy ʾgml see LP 435-436 [L67 68 70]. The name (whether a place-name or a description) would be appropriate to the meaning of ṣyr.

SIJ 837: ‘hly “people” for ’hl (-h). JSaN p. 56 note 57; ‘hly a N.Pr. or emend to ’hl (-h) “his people”. CSA p. 16: ’hl (-h) “his family”. JMAA XV p. 87: ‘hly a N.Pr. “no reason at all to correct ’hly”.

Commentary:
The distinction between the very common word ‘l and the very rare word ’hl is unclear. It is possible that ’hl refers to an individual’s specific tent-group (cf ’hl = “tent” in Hebrew) but check Musil.

Commentary:
The text begins vertically to the left of SIJ Extra 24 cuts across the end of 24 and then doubles back and runs diagonally across the left side of the face. It seems to continue vertically after ngy. The second letter has been altered from ʾ to ʃ. The middle letters of this name have been rendered illegible. The ʿ of d-‘l in 24 has been written between the arms of the r of 25 suggesting that 25 must have been written first. The b of the third bn has been written inside the arms of the final b of ʾḥbb. l mjyr bn zyd bn ṭś² w bnyʾl- bn -h wʾlf

By Mḥyr son of Zyd son of ṭś² and he built for his son and fed [the animals]

Apparatus Criticus:
SIT: ṭl[f] for ṭś². SIAM II p. 194: read ṭś² for third name and it is uncertain whether the last four letters belong to the text. JMAA VIII p. 3: ṭl for ṭl[f]. JMAA XIII p. 196-197: ṭś² for ṭl[f]; reads the last four letters as a separate text in the opposite direction to that in which they were read by SIT: ḫkw a proper name "Fkʾw".

Commentary:
The s² has a vertical stroke with an arm at right angles at one end and a curve at the other. The last four letters have thicker carelessly hammered lines. Whilst SIAM II and JMAA XIII might be correct in suggesting that they are a separate text it is perhaps more likely that they do belong to this text and have been subsequently hammered over. JMAA XIII’s suggestion is highly improbable.

Provenance:

By ʿzz son of Grm of the lineage of Kkbn

Apparatus Criticus:
SIT: the n at the end is uncertain. JMAA XIII p.197: the n at the end is certain and the sign of a circle with a cross in it is a wasm.

Commentary:
SIT points out the k's resemble Thamudic ġ's which is mistakenly printed as g in the publication. SIT would have been referring to Thamudic E. There is definitely a short stroke at the end after the b although it is inscribed in a slightly different technique. The circle with a cross in the middle might be a wasm as suggested by JMAA XIII but this is by no means certain.

H unp.: f h lt (n)ṣr at the end "So Lt [give] victory".

Commentary:
The n after the first r is clear on the photograph. The most likely reading of the word after the second w is rʿ(y)ʾ which presumably the author repeated by mistake. The first letter resembles a r more than a b the second letter is uncertain but there could be an intentional dot inscribed slightly away from the centre of the preceding letter and the next letter is a line with ahammered dot at one end although it is not as pronounced as the one in the y of the previous word. The next letter is definitely an ʿ and is followed by a slight dash and then a gap which is large enough for another letter but nothing has been inscribed there possibly because the author wanted to avoid a crack in the rock. The letter after the gap could be a b or a r as could the letter which has been added to the side of the k. The letters (ḡ)rt are written in thicker lines and the r is joined to the t. There is then a w which is partially infilled and a n.

SS 3 (Musée du Louvre AO 19801)

By Rḥl son of Tfn

Commentary:
The text is carved on a fine limestone relief showing the god Ba’al-Sāmīn in the centre with Aglibōl on his right and Malakbēl on the left. There are five Palmyrene graffiti (SS 1, 2, 4, 5, 7), one Greek (SS 6) and one Safaitic (SS 3) carved between the figures. The last is carved vertically on the lower right of the relief beside the sword of Malakbēl. For the bibliography on the relief and an excellent photograph see Dentzer-Feydy & Teixidor 1993: 144–145, no. 153 (but note that the transliteration of the Safaitic inscription contains a misprint in the second name). The same two names occur in both the Safaitic inscription and in one of the Palmyrene texts (SS 2). Starcky’s copy of SS 3 shows a curving line at the end of the Safaitic inscription but this is not confirmed on the photograph.

Stein 1.1

(I) ᵜʾwdm ᵜh- bkrt

{By} ᵜʾwdm is the young she-camel

Apparatus Criticus:
RVP: There is no mention in the commentary that the first letter in the copy has the form of a h.

Commentary:
The copy has a h for the first letter. There are dots between the arms of the b and k of bkrt. It is possible that h- bkrt belongs to Stein 1.2 rather than with this text.

Provenance:
At the foot of a cairn on a small hill 1/4 mile north of telegraph post 448-447 RVP p. 255, unspecified region, unspecified country.

By (Ydq)t son of S¹wl son of (Hṛt)

Apparatus Criticus:
RVP: l yd(ʿ) t bn s¹wn bn ḥrt. JSafN p. 100: l ydht bn s¹wl gḥrt "By Ydht son of s¹wl. Distressful year!".

Commentary:
The circle of the fourth letter is rather large to be an ʿ and there is a line with a hook going through the middle. The first n is copied as a dot and the second as a line. The two arms of the first letter of the third name are joined together. It is possible it should be read as a ḥ.

{l}ṣ¹[r]k bn b[n] qdm

By {ṣ¹rk} {son of} Qdm

Apparatus Criticus:
RVP: As the above except there is no indication that the copy is doubtful after the b. JРИС p. 278: points out that the name ‘ṣ¹rk occurs in this text and is not new as claimed by ISB.

Commentary:
The copies of r and b are doubtful and there is possibly a further letter before the q.

Commentary:
The rock is damaged after the third ḡ and the following three letters are difficult to read from the photograph. It seems most likely that the first letter after the second occurrence of ḡlm should be read as a k as there is no second prong. The r at the end is doubtful as there are abrasions.

Apparatus Criticus:
ThNSSMAS 7: whblt bn hbl w [b][n][y] ThSMJ 6: whblt bn hbl w [b][n][y]

Commentary:
The beginning of the inscription is damaged. No initial l is visible and the first letter read is a circle but no crossbar is visible. The first letter of the second name is a different shape to the previous h in the text and it seems unlikely it should be read as a such. It is a short straight line with a horizontal line sticking out. It could be a d or possibly a z in the Hismaic form of that letter. The third letter of the name is a line with a hook. The previous l does not have a hook and it seems most likely the letter should be read as a r.

Commentary:
One prong of the second ‘ is doubtful. The end of the second name is difficult to interpret. There is a dot near the tail of the y which is read as a n by TNSSMAS and then there is a curve which does not seem to closed in the photograph with a dot inside it. TNSSMAS reads the letter as a circle with a dot and transliterates it as a g. It is more likely it be read as a b and a n.

Commentary:
The first y is not legible in the photograph although it appears in the copy. The last part is very doubtful but the photograph suggests the penultimate letter should be read as an ‘ rather than a n and the letter before that in the copy looks more like a r. The reading of the first letter of the second name is doubtful. The name M’y is unattested in North Arabian though M’y is found once in Palmyrene (Stark 1971: 34-95) and cf. the name Mā’ai in Nehemiah 12: 36.

The second latter is rather large and it is possible that it should be read g. The last two letters of the second name are very doubtful. There might be a ṣ with no spine and a dot for the loop after the ḥ and it is possible that there is a y following it although its shape would be more accurately represented in ThNS than in ThNSSMAS. The reading of the second name as it appears on the copy is difficult. The name Ḥṣy seems to be attested only once in Thamudic C (Winnett and Reed 1973: 203 c).

Commentary:
The second letter is more like a b and the third is larger and presumably a r. From the photograph it seems clear that the letter after the second n is a y and then there appears to be a short line which is probably an l as the initial l is quite short. The following letter might be an š but one prong is uncertain and then there appears to be a š without a spine although one line is doubtful and it is possible it should be read as a y. The following two letters are only partially in the photograph and the w read by the publications does not appear to be there at all. The first of the partial letters has loop and a line and it might be a y or a ť it is unlikely to be a š if the reading of a spineless š is correct. The next letter is probably a d although part of the line is missing.

Commentary:
The reading of the first name is clear. The first letter of the third name is written on a curve in the direction of the text and it is rather ambiguous as to whether it should be read as a z or a s. The next letter is a f and the following letter is almost certainly a b judging by the other b’s in the text and the shape of the r in ThSaf 18. Both zfb and sfb would be difficult to explain as names and it seems possible that the b is dittography which the author did not erase when he decided it would be better to write the b with the following n slightly above the end of ThSaf 18.

By ʾṯm son of Bgt {son of} S¹---q

Apparatus Criticus:
ThNSSMAS: ʾḏm bn ṛḥ; p. 111: ʾn h- {g}{m}{l} written near the inscription. ThNSM.III 3.1: ʾdm bn ṛḥ; comm. p. 267 n. 33: maybe read as Thamudic ʾl s¹ʾṯm bn bgt²; p. 267 n. 34: ʾn h- {g}{m}{l} written near the inscription.

Commentary:
It seems most likely that this inscription should be read as Hismaic accordingly the grid sign is read as a t and the line with loops at either end is read as a g. The second bn is doubtful as the b is very small and the n carelessly inscribed. The s¹ and q are much larger than the other letters of the text and there is rather a large space in between them. Both the editions mention further letters near the inscription but these are difficult to read from the photograph see ThSaf 51.1

The fourth letter is damaged and although the damage is in the shape of an ʿ it is possible the letter should be read as a r or possibly a l. The second letter of the second name could be a r and the second letter of the third name is a slightly wavy line and it is possible it should be read as a s² or a l. Commentary:
The reading of the first name is very difficult. The second l is a very long line and the letter read as a m is facing away from the direction of the text. It is possible it is the correct reading but the lines do not seem to be completely joined. The second letter of the second name is most likely a đ although the fork is rather damaged. Commentary:
This text is direct hammered in broad letters.

Provenance:
Wādī Gharah, ridge north of Ġisr Umm Rāmiḥ, Rif Dimašq, Syria
The inscriptions were found on the ridge N. of the ġisr (a simple causeway over which the water flows when the wadi is in flood), on the gently sloping right bank of the Wādī Gharah, which is not very deep at this point. There are a number of graves and cairns (one with two "columns" of stones), near some of which inscriptions were found. C, following Dunand, divides these inscriptions into those from "the right bank of Wādī al-Ghara" (C 189-247) and those from "the right bank of Wādī Gharah near the bridge" (C 248-291). We discovered texts from both groups within the same small area on the right bank just upstream of the bridge.

\textit{l mflʾ bn ʾḥ w h dtʾ sʿq -n mšlmḏwlmh}

By Mflʾ son of ʾḥ and O Dtn send rain on mכ mšlmḏwlmh

Commentary:
This inscription is difficult to interpret. Sʾq could possibly be related to the imperative of Arabic saqā-hu "He [God] sent rain to him" (Lane 1384c), but -n as the first person singular/plural enclitic pronoun would be very unusual. For the rest we are unable to offer a convincing interpretation. The deity dtʾ is known in Safaitic from LP 1097 (as reread in OCIANA from a new photograph) and in Thamudic B (HU 657, 727, JSTham 258, 262, HE 27, WHI 51, 55, 65, 66, 69, 77, 80+81, 82, 90, 91) and Thamudic C (HU 235, 388, 618). It is obviously different from the local deity ʾlt dtʾ which is found in Safaitic in C 994, 1292, 2446, and 2984, where dtʾ represents a place name, probably somewhere close to, or within, the Ruhbah in southern Syria. For a discussion see Macdonald, Al Muʾazzin & Nehmé 1996: 474-476.

Al-Jallad translation: By ḫṣ't son of S'krn son of Grm'l and he grieved for 'bgr of the lineage ḏf the year Wḥb'ł was announced commander.

Commentary:
Safaitic hdy has been tentatively translated as "leader", to be connected with the Arabic root hdy "to guide."
It occurs in similar contexts in KRS 25; KRS 303; KRS 995; KRS 1024; KRS 1086; WH 575; WH 1859, etc. One difficulty with this interpretation is that the word lacks definite concord with its antecedent; in other words, the article is missing. We should expect h- hdy rather than simply hdy. Perhaps this suggests the title was lexicalized without the article, but more evidence is required before this position can be accepted.

WH 20: translation of narrative: “he has left this camping-place with the goats”

Commentary:

For ḡy b as "to be concealed" see Lane 2312b and 2313a-c in various nouns. WH’s translation “he has left this camping-place” is difficult to square with writing the inscription! [MCAM]

Commentary:

The spelling of ḡṛ as (b)ḡṛ following the preposition ḥ may suggest that the glottal stop was weakened in this context: *‘ālā‘agbar > ‘ālā-bgar. The ḡ looks more like a w but this may be an error on the part of the copyist.

š bgd bn m’n w b’s¹ nm

By šbgd son of M’n and he suffered while sleeping

Apparatus Criticus:
WH 22: translation of nm as "lice", in connection with Arabic nam’, lice.

Commentary:
The penultimate letter is clearly n on the photograph despite a small circular abrasion at one end. [MCAM] WH’s interpretation of nm is unconvincing, as there is no evidence for the general loss of the glottal stop in Safaitic. Instead, it might be better to interpret it as an adverbial accusative of the root nwm, "to sleep, rest, die," probably *ba’is¹a nawm.

By Sṣrb son of ʾḥbb son of Nṣ²wn in the spacious pasture

Apparatus Criticus:

Commentary:
M.C.A. Macdonald (Burial between the Desert and the Sown, Damaszener Mitteilungen 15 2006:294-295) argues against the notion of the ownership of immovable property in desert societies. The SD translation renders the phrase "h- rʿy h- rḥb" as a locative expression, which could, in theory, continue the Proto-Semitic locative case *-um, reflexes of which are found in the Classical Arabic prepositions baʿdu 'yet', etc. Given the limitations of the orthography, this suggestion is impossible to prove at this point.

The fourth letter is identical in shape to the b of bn. A dot attached to its back (making it look like a š’) is of a different texture to the rest of the letter and is probably accidental. The name Mḥbt is found in another (unpublished) text from the H4 area. The middle stroke of the ḥ is shorter than the other two, is off centre, and protrudes beyond the back. At first sight it is tempting to read the name as ‘byn but this does not explain the middle stroke in the letter. [MCAM].

By Wʿy son of Bny son of Nṣ₂ʿʾl and 0 Ylt nqʿt to him who effaces this inscription

Commentary:
The meaning of nqʿt is uncertain. WH connect it with Classical Arabic najʿat "evil eye" but there are no other instances of Arabic /j/ corresponding to Safaitic /q/. Rodinson (Arabica 6, 1959, pp.217-218) connects it with Akkadian naqū/negū "to pour out libations to the dead", "to scatter dust on the head as a sign of mourning", but this hardly seems to fit the present context. The final two letters are spaced about twice as far from each other than the others.

I ḫ'rt bn wqr w wgm 't· ḫbb

By Ḫ'rt son of Wqr and he grieved for Ḫbb

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: "and he grieved for a loved one"

Commentary:
Here, ḥbb is either an undefined noun "a loved one" or a personal name (cf. Arabic Ḥabīb). In other texts, we find wgm l ḥbb h - "he mourned for his beloved" or ḥbb f ḥbb "one loved one after another", in which case ḥbb is clearly a noun. In the present text, however, it seems unlikely that the author would be vague about the person he was grieving for (by leaving the noun indefinite), especially given the vast number of texts in which the person(s) grieved for is/are named. Thus, it seems more probable that ḥbb is a personal name. [MCAM]

By Mlkf son of ‘mrn son of ḡrb and he grieved for ‘gr and ’sʁ hr

Apparatus Criticus:
WH 63: w ng'

Commentary:
The edition reads w ng' following ’sʁ hr. These two words are curiously smaller than the rest of the inscription and scratched in more deeply. They, rather, look closer to the hand of WH 67, and so we have removed them from the current reading.

l rm----{ḥ}lm----yt ḫ ll n'

By Rn ---- {ḥlm} ---- Yṯ and he camped n' ----

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: hnn "and show pity" for ḫll

Commentary:
WH reads the verb in this inscription as an imperative. It is more likely a third person singular as imperatives usually follow a subject introduced by the vocative h-. Moreover, the final two strokes of this word are rather elongated, virtually identical in length to the /l/ in ḫlm, suggesting that we should read the verb as ḫll. The expression "PN and he camped X" is very common while "PN and he showed mercy X" is unknown.

Commentary:
WH take "nqm" as an imperative verb "avenge!", but the absence of a pronominal suffix makes this interpretation unlikely. It is more likely a nominal direct object of a gapped verb (see Wright vol II, p.72). the third l of the inscription is clearly a y on the photograph.

The Hebrew cognate of Arabic ḍrāk, ṣārāk "have need of", is a better semantic match for the Safaitic ṣār. Thus, the Hebrew word "favour" rather than as the name of the deity. Ṣār, "[divine] favour" in invocations, is very common in Dadanitic.

Commentary:
It is difficult to justify the loop on the final letter of the second name. The letter preceding it, {l}, has a similar loop, but reading it as y would produce the unattested name ʿyy. On the other hand, it is possible to read both as l, producing the name ʿll.

WH 128
l ṣzn¹ bn rgl w whd ġzz

By ṣzn’ son of Rgl and he was alone while raiding

Commentary:
The syntax of this inscription suggests that we should take whd as a verb. WH connect it to Classical Arabic wahada/wahuda ‘to be alone’. In this case, it is unlikely that ġzz is also a verb, as serial suffix conjugation constructions are unknown. Instead, we read ġzz as a verbal noun, ‘raiding’, functioning as a circumstantial accusative.

`l qny f h l t qbl l· ḫl sʾlm fnngy`
By Qny so O Lt [grant] acceptance to the family of S¹lm so that we may be saved

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: "...and let us escape"

Commentary:
The phrase qbl l ʾhl can be interpreted in two ways: (1) qbl l-ʾhl, where the second l is a dative preposition or (2) as the reduplicated form, qbl. Qbll is common in Safaitic, and should probably be connected to Classical Arabic iqballa, iqbilā. The reduplicated form can take a direct object, MKWS 8: w s¹lm w qbl ʾḥbb, or govern a prepositional phrase, AbNSJ 1: w s¹lm w qbl l-ʾḥbb, with no apparent difference in meaning. It might also be the case that instances without the overt expression of the dative simply reflect assimilation with the final l of qbl. The verb nngy is likely the passive of the subjunctive, nungaya. The use of the subjunctive following the conjunction f- expresses the result or effect of the preceding clause, which must have an imperative, wish, or something equivalent in meaning. e.g.: Classical Arabic iğfir lī yā rabbi fa-ādhula al-ʾāmmara 'pardon me, O my Lord, so that I may enter Paradise' (Wright, Ar. Gr., vol. II §15.d). This explanation is also more phonologically satisfying, since the final y requires an original word final triphthong. WH's reading suggests that the verb was a jussive, which would have either terminated in a short vowel or a diphthong, both of which would not show up in the orthography.

WH read the second name as whblh however, the marks they read as ln are non-descript hammerings above the second h, whereas there is plenty of room for the text to have continued in a straight horizontal line after the h. On the photograph, there are other faintly scratched texts which cannot be read with any certainty. [MCAM]

I ṭlt bn tm bn ’s¹ḥr ẓ- ’l ṭlt w ṣḥt h- ’(t)f ls¹ f rdy

By ṭlt son of ṭm son of ’s¹ḥr of the lineage of ṭlt and he passed through — so he was pleased

Apparatus Criticus:

WH: ’...He passed quickly through the new growth (which) he ate and was satisfied (or through ha-’lts¹)

Commentary:

WH’s interpretation of ’f as ‘new growth’ comes from comparison with the Classical Arabic expressions, ’anf al-matar ’the first vegetation produced by rain’ and ’anf al-mar’a ‘the first of the herbage or pasture’, with the assimilation of the /n/ in Safaitic. Since /ls¹/ can be connected to Classical Arabic lassa ’to eat, graze’, one could be tempted to interpret the two words as constituting a construct chain, ’l-­ls¹ ’first pasture (?)’. The definite article on the first term, however, makes this unlikely. The reading of ls¹ as a verb ’to eat, graze’ is also difficult from a syntactic point of view, as we would expect either a conjunction or relative pronoun to connect it with the rest of the sentence. A close inspection of the photograph reveals that there is an unread t between the third ’ and the following f. This produces the rather awkward sequence ’tfls¹’. The length (5 consonants) and the final s¹ could suggest that it is an attempt to approximate a Greco-Roman personal name or toponym, but which one exactly is unclear.

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: Translation of narrative "He drove [camels] from the Ḥaurān and pastured [them] in every region."

Commentary:
The meaning of kll is 'each, every' when governing an singular indefinite noun (Wright, Ar. Gr., Vol. II §82.d). WH reading of trd as an active verb with a gapped object is unlikely. While the gapping of verbs is common, gapped objects are far rarer, and, aside from this ambiguous case, unknown with the verb trd (see KhBG 8; KhBG 257; KhBG 403; WH 3049; BTH 228; LP 732). Thus, we take trd as a passive verb, 'was driven (out)'. The same double meaning, to drive animals and to drive away, occurs in Arabic. This would also explain why the author had to pasture in other regions.

Apparatus Criticus:

WH: offer no translation of "...ʾlm qdm nʿbn"

Commentary:

We translate /ʾlmqdmnʿbn/ as an epithet of Rḏw similar to the ʿālim-epithets of Allāh, Q35:38 ʿālimu ẓaybi l-samawāṭi wal-ʿardī ‘all-knowing of the unseen of the heavens and the earth’; Q59:22 ʿālimu l-ẓaybi wal-ṣahādātī ‘all-knowing of the unseen and seen’. We connect nʿb to the Classical Arabic verb ʾanāba, ‘to repent, to draw close’ (ʾanāba ʿilā ʾallāh). In this case, nʿb is likely a participial form, perhaps ʾnāʾib, with a sound masculine plural suffix. The first /m/ of WH’s qdm is better read as a relative pronoun, mā, followed by the verb qdm, which, in the D-stem, means ‘to offer up, present’. This epithet invites comparison with Qur’ānic verses in which Allāh affirms that he knows who indeed is a hypocrite and who is sincere, e.g.: Q4:63 ‘ulāʾika l-laqtina yaʾlamu llāhu mā fī qulūbihim...’and those are the ones of whom Allah knows what is in their hearts’.

l kmd bn s²(k)r bn [n]ṣrʾl bn zbdy w wgḍ `ṭ r kmd f ng`

By Kmd son of {S²lr} son of {Nṣrʾl} son of Zbdy and he found the inscription of Kmd and suffered

Commentary:
There are two possible etymologies for ngʾ. The first connects it with Ethiopic, nagwʾa ‘shout, be broken, break’ and Hebrew, nāğa ‘touch, hurt’, which has a niphal form, meaning ‘to be stricken, defeated in battle’, and a puʿal, meaning ‘to be stricken by diseases’ (BDB, p.619). The second connects it with Arabic waḡaʾa ‘suffer pain, agony (physical and emotional)’. The verb naḡaʾa in Arabic means ‘to be useful’, which hardly fits this context. Van den Branden (al-Machriq 63 [1969], p.738, n.1) interprets ngʾ as the VII form, the n-stem, of waḡaʾ. WH point out that there are no I-w n-stem verbs in Arabic and claim that the same is probably true for Safaitic. There is, in fact, no reason to assume that this restriction held in Safaitic, as I-w n-stem verbs are common elsewhere in Semitic, including many Arabic dialects. In fact, the n-stem of the verb wgʾ fits nicely in the context of this inscription. The proto-Central Semitic form would have been *nawgaʾa (cf. Hb. nūlaḏ ’was born’ < *nawlada), which would appear in Safaitic orthography as ngʾ.

WH: "He fought against HRT in revenge for the she-camel [taken] from Maʾn"

Commentary:
WH connect tbl with Arabic tbl 'vengeance', but ṭr or qṣṣ are more frequent in Safaitic. Tbl should instead be connected to the Akkadian verb wabalu 'to bring, carry'. It is presumably the infinitive of the D-stem, wabala > tawbil. The word 'b'il 'dromedary' might be derived in some way from this root. WH take Ḥrt as the name of a tribe on the basis of its appearance with a nisba ending in WH 424, but the nisba ending could equally suggest that it is a toponym.

I nwl bn ʾml w h rdw whb l- h- s¹ʾl n(f)d[t]t- h

By Nwl son of ʾml and O Rdw grant to the petitioner his request

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: nḥt for nf[d]t; translation of nḥt "his gift"

Commentary:
The photograph reveals that the third to last letter is in fact a d; the two horizontal lines are clear and the left vertical intersecting line is also clear. The right vertical line is worn, but can still be made out. The root nḥṭ in Arabic has the sense of shaking or knocking, and can refer to a range of things, from the fallen fruit of the tree to a women having many children (Lane 2832). The context of this inscription makes it clear that nḥṭ refers to the object of the petitioner’s request, but anything more exact is impossible to determine. Our current interpretation also differs from WH’s reading in terms of syntax. WH take s¹ʾl n(f)[h]t-ḥ [sic] as a genitive construction and l-ḥ as the dative preposition with a clitic 3ms pronoun. We think it makes more sense to regard h- s¹ʾl as a definite noun, the dative object of whb, as it is difficult to make sense of what an alleged "petition of his request" should mean. The suffix pronoun on the final word also rules out interpretations that involve general petitions for things, such as petitions for offspring, agricultural produce, etc.

By Fṯ son of Ḫmgt and O Yṯ deliver him from him who {possesses} (?) evil

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: ...mḏr s’ for m-ḏ {k}fs’; translation "an evil stench"

Commentary:
What WH take as an f looks more like a k on the photograph, but admittedly one reminiscent of Thamudic B. WH’s r is in fact the lower half of an f, the upper half of which is damaged but easily made out from on the photo. Kf is attested in KRS 1866, with the meaning of "to overturn". This meaning does not fit the current context, as it would seem odd for the author to request deliverance from "the overturner". Rather, we would connect kf with palm, cf. Arabic kaff, and treat the phrase idiomatically as one who has evil in his hand, i.e., one who possesses evil.

Ḥzwyyh

Ḥzwyyh

Commentary:
If this is indeed a name, it is previously unattested in Safaitic. The word lends itself to many interpretations. One is tempted to connect the first component to Hebrew and Aramaic ḥāzā, "to see", but the occurrence of Arabic ḥazā "to see with inner vision, of an astrologer", complicates the matter, as Safaitic ḫ does not correspond regularly with Arabic ḥ. Given the root’s restricted sense in Arabic, however, it could very well be a borrowing from Aramaic, which could explain the aberrant correspondence. The final two letters could be the theophoric element yāḥū. Indeed, names such as ḥazāyā (Neh 11:5); ḥazīʾel (2 Kings 8:8,13,16) etc. occur in the Bible. The derivation of a putative ḥzyćw is difficult to explain. The y may be dittography, in which case, ḥyw could be a suffix conjugation verb or a participle.

WH: translation of nbṭ, "he dug down to water"

Commentary:
WH correctly connect nbṭ with Arabic, meaning "to dig down to water, or to dig a well", but their interpretation of the word as a finite verb is unsatisfactory. In constructions such as these, Safaitic introduces the narrative with a conjunction, either w or f. The absence of such here suggests to me that the word is part of the name, perhaps a faʿʿāl form indicating profession, nabbāṭ "well-digger". One occasionally finds frs¹ "horseman" in the same position.

{l ʿḏ bn ʿḏ bn ʿt w mty whdy m- ḫrn ḥ s²ḥqm s’lm

By ʿḏ son of ʿḏ son of ʿt and he journeyed alone from the ḫrn so O S²ḥqm [grant] security

Apparatus Criticus:
MNH p. 340: w mty whd(h) m- ḫrn ḥ s²ḥqm s’lm - and he travelled in haste from the Hawrân by himself and so O s²ḥqm [grant] security; p. 342: on going to and fro from the Hawrân.
WH: parse whdy as w ḥdy, translation of ḥdy as "to urge (camels) forward by singing".

Commentary:
We find MNH’s interpretation of whdy as an adverb meaning “alone, by himself" more convincing than WH’s translation. Whdy probably consists of the nisba ending -yy attached to the base whd “one”. It is, however, unclear if a vowel, -a or -ā, follows this suffix. Note that if this interpretation is correct, it differs significantly from its Classical Arabic equivalent, wahda-hu “by himself”.

By ʾbd son of Tdʾ

Commentary:
There is a lightly scratched vertical line following the first t which intersects with its horizontal line. If this mark was intentional, it would appear that there are two consecutive tʾs following n. This interpretation is tempting as it would render the second word bnt “daughter” rather than bn. Etymological bint- is, as far as I know, always spelled in Safaitic as bt with the assimilation of the t, so the preservation of etymological n might support the view that the line in question is a stray mark.

By Wṣʾmʾl son of Yʾmr son of ’sʰq son of ḥzʾ son of Mdd son of Bny and he spent the dry season at Brkt whilst migrating with the tribe the year of {Nrsʾmṛ}

Apparatus Criticus:
MST p. 9 n. 46: w qyz brkt - and he spent the dry season at Brkt. WH: nr sm(m) for nrsʾm(r), translation "(when) a hot sandstorm appeared or a flock of birds appeared”; translation of nwy “departing.”
Commentary:
Final letter has only a single curve, unlike the double curve of the preceding letter, but is also unlike the bs and rs in the text. The name nrs¹m(r) is previously unattested. Its length might suggest that it is a compound of some sort, but more is unclear.

lʾs¹ bn ḥyft h- bkrt w ḥwb h- mrʾt

The she-camel is by ʾs¹ son of Hyft and he fornicated with this woman

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: Translation of ḥwb "he loved"
Commentary:
In most cases, ḥwb is clearly one of the terms for grieving in Safaitic, but both the semantic and syntax context (the object is not introduced by a preposition) make it such an interpretation here difficult. WH connect it to Arabic ḥbb "to love", but without any phonological justification. Another sense of ḥwb is to "sin" or "commit a sin", cf. Arabic ḥāba (Lane 662). In this context, it most likely refers to illicit sexual relations. A dancing woman, perhaps a representation of the author’s sexual partner, accompanies the inscription. Curiously, no representation of a she-camel accompanies the inscription.

On the photograph and facsimile (pl. 14) but not read by WH who however refer to the text they call 604 as 604a on p. 31. Beeston (BRWH p. 134) suggests calling the unread text 604 and the read one 604a. However this would add confusion so it seems simpler to call the one WH read 604a (as on p. 31) and the unread one as 604b. Beeston reads the first name in 604b as ḥbb which is impossible.

Iʿfy bn ṭ rd w ʾḥy bḥtḥ- ṭ ṭ rd wr ṭ h b-qṭl w ṭ t- h m-liḥy[n] h- sʾnt

By Fty son of Rwḍ and he spent the night in this fertile land and lived at ease amidst spring vegetation and deliver him from Lḥyn this year.

Apparatus Criticus:
WH 641.1: "he pitched a tent in this land and lived at ease amidst spring vegetation. [O god], deliver him from moving away this year"

(r)bḥl for liḥy[n]

Commentary:
L r and n are carefully distinguished in this text. L always has a right-angled hook at one end; r is always a shallow curve with no hooks; and n is a straight line with no hooks. The reading must therefore be b-qṭl and m-liḥy[n] even though the n is rather long. ṭ rd here probably means "land that becomes luxuriant in herbage" cf Arabic ʾarīḍ (Lane 49a) For ṭ ṭ ṭ see WH 597. No deity is invoked in the prayer for deliverance. Since elsewhere (BRevn A2, B1), the tribe of Lḥyān is referred to as ʿl Ḥyān (i.e. "the lineage group of Lḥyn") and Ḥyān can be a personal name in Safaitic, it seems likely that Ḥyān in this inscription is a person rather than a group.

By Dʿḥt son of Lḥf son of Hknf son of Mḥql son of Nbʾt and he found the inscription of his grandfather and he grieved [for him]

Commentary:
L and n are very clearly distinguished in this text with many of the l’s being of exceptional length. Although WH read the second name as nṯl comparison of the first letter with the n of bn shows that it must be a l. The fifth name lḥf is unattested and could be a dialectal variant of ṡṯl. This is supported by the fifth name where again comparison with the n of the preceding bn shows that it must be nbʾt in place of the usual lbʾt.

Commentary:
Vandalised by additions. The dots are probably forms of "joining" the letters as is the line between the last auctoris and the next letter. This may have been a k one bar of which was extended into a circle. We suggest that the b of bn was turned into a w. Since the l’s are not hooked the penultimate letter must be a r.

Given the nature of the document, it seems to be a collection of historical inscriptions, possibly from the Safaitic script, known for their scribal errors and historical context. The text contains translations and brief descriptions of each inscription, followed by notes on provenance, references, and commentary. Here is the structured representation:

WH 1673

> l $^{2}$mt bn rmy n bn $^{\circ}$bh $^{\circ}$ l df w wld b - bql h - m`zy

By $^{2}$mt son of Rmy n son of $^{\circ}$bh of the lineage of Df and he helped the goats to give birth on spring herbage

Provenance:
Unspecified site, unspecified region, unspecified country.

---

WH 1675

> l $^{\circ}$zm bn $^{\circ}$b bn grm][][1] bn `bd bn n`mn bn kn w $^{2}$rq b - h - ms$^{\circ}$rt w ][][]h$^{\circ}$ bn dd - h `s$^{\circ}$r f h lt rwh l - d - gns

By $^{\circ}$zm son of $^{\circ}$b son of Grm{1} son of `bd son of N`mn son of Kn and he migrated to the inner desert with the military unit and was on the look-out for his cousin who is a captive and O Lt [grant] relief to him who is distressed.

Commentary:
The author wrote the m of grm{1} twice and scratched over the second. The letter before h - ms$^{\circ}$rt has a definite curve and is identical to the b's (as opposed to the l's) in the text. The author wrote a q before h$^{\circ}$ which he then scratched over.

By Whblh son of Zn¹l son of Whblh son of Mlk and he built the shelter for Hn’ and he tracked a horseman to the MS¹TY the year the tribe of ḏF was cut to pieces. And, Lt [grant] security and there returned into the camp a hundred horses

Apparatus Criticus:
MNH p. 347: on Greek inscription; n. 288: might be the father of the author in WH 1861.

Commentary:
A study of the original stone shows that the fourth name is mlk (rather than ml as read by WH) and indeed it is shown as such on WH’s facsimile (Pl. 70). The word bhr is new. WH read it as btr but this is impossible since the text is very carefully written with the height of the letters maintained at a constant level and a clear distinction preserved between signs of the same form but different sizes (g/t/1/n h/t). The letter in question is far larger than any of the t’s in the inscription and can only be a h. The meaning however is obscure.

Commentary:
Unfortunately the inscription was inked in white before it was photographed and this has obscured the reading. The last two letters of the second name which were not inked can be seen on the photograph. The sign before ‘s²rq which WH read as f is inaccurately represented on their facsimile and is probably a w though there are some unexplained additional lines around the letter.

By Mṣqr son of Mṣqr and he migrated to the encampment of Hn' in the inner desert

Commentary:
On the photograph it is clear that the second name is nzl not ntn (as read by WH). The line before ms³{'}rt has a definite curve at one end like the b's of the bn's whereas the ām auctoris and the l of nzl are straight. It must therefore be a b. The supposed l before mdb{r} is a small scratch above the foot of the ' of h{n}'. Mdb{r} must represent the equivalent of what in Standard Arabic would be an adverbial accusative.

_l ’nʾm bn s²hm bn ġṭ w bny h- s¹trt l- hn’ hdy sʾnt mṣr ’l whbʾl l- gr[s²]

By ’nʾm son of S²hm son of ġṭ and he [helped] build the fortified encampment for Hn’ the commander the year of the expeditionary force of ’l Whbʾl to Gerasa.

Apparatus Criticus:
SIAM p. 196: first name ’nʾm.

Commentary:
Both ’nʾm and ġṭ are clear on the stone. It is possible that s¹trt represents some form of military structure if hdy is the leader of a military unit. It is also tempting to connect mṣr with the South Arabian mṣr ‘expeditionary force’ — from the root syr — (cf. JRWH p. 500). If this is so [and other instances of mṣr need to be checked] the mṣr ’l Whbʾl would presumably a unit drawn from the ’l Whbʾl comparable to the ms¹rt ’l mrt in M.... Finally it is impossible to decide whether the more lightly scratched lower lines of the last letter are accidental in which case the sign is a f or intentional in which case it is a s². In the latter case the temptation to identify grs² as Gerasa/Jerash is almost irresistible. The translation offered above is based on all these hypotheses and can be no more than a tentative suggestion on which much more work would need to be done before publication.

The top of the second letter has been damaged and it is not certain whether it is a ṣ or a h. The m of the second name has been filled in with careful pecking. The position of the k is curious. It does not seem to have been omitted and then inserted since there is space enough for it between the m and the b. On the other hand it is completely in the style of this text and is unlikely to belong to the end of 1877. On their facsimile WH omit the side-stroke and join it to the final letter of 1877.

lʾrsʾ(y) bn grgrl

By ʾrsʾ(y) son of Grgrl

Commentary:
Although the second name is bizarre it is clear on the photograph. In this name the fifth letter (a straight vertical line) is clearly differentiated from the second and fourth letters (straight vertical lines with a curve at the top). The fifth can only be a l which suggests that the second and fourth must be rʾs. The first three letters of the text are more crudely formed than the rest and this may account for the differences between on the one hand the lām auctoris and the rʾ of ʿrsʾ(y) and on the other the rʾs and l of the second name.

By {Lwh} son of {Mlrm}
Commentary:
Several letters have been altered and the second has been erased. It is possible that the third has been transformed from a l into a r and the bar of the w appears to have been hammered over though traces of it can still be seen. The following letter has been thoroughly hammered over but from the traces still visible it may have been a h. In the patronym forks have been hammered over the bases of the second and third letters Neither can have been a b which the bn shows to have been much more squat. The first could have been a l similar to the lām auctoris in which case the third may have been a r.

By Bnyt son of Mḥm (son of) Bdn son of 'r son of ṣn son of ḫrm son of 'wd (son of) Gm’s¹ is the monument

Commentary:
WH’s facsimile is very inaccurate. The 8th letter cannot be g as read by WH nor ġ since it is followed by h (cf. the ḥ of hrṃ). It can only be a m therefore. Each of the 3 m’s in this text is of a quite different shape. The n of the second bn is larger than the others and is surmounted by a small fork which is presumably accidental though it looks intentional. There is a wavy line to the left of the n of the final bn which is of a slightly different quality from the n.

WH 2035

l dʾy bn s²wkt w ḥwy(t) (h-) s²ʿrt

By Dʾy son of S²wkt and Sirius set but had brought no rain.

Commentary:
WH’s interpretation seems unlikely. However NB in Arabic ḥawā and ḥawwā can mean (the stars) set aurally and brought no rain (Lane 827/b) while al-ʾiʿrā is Sirius. There are 2 stars of this name called the sisters of Suhayl. However al-ʾiʿrā is said to rise around 27 June (El sv a-ʾś-ʾīrā) or in the time of intense heat (Lane 1560 b-c) or rules for 40 nights in Jan/Febr in a-ʾṭāʾ (Musil Rwa[a p. 8]). I cannot find whether the 2 stars with this name rise at opposite ends of the year. If so and Musil’s statement is correct for one of them the statement in the inscription would be a complaint that winter had passed without bringing rain.

By Mny son of Tm and he pastured the meadows while migrating

Commentary:
The third letter could also be a ġ but in that case it would be the mirror image of the later ġ. Rġlt is probably a plant either rogeyla (Atriplex dimorphostegia K.K.) the “raw stalks or tuberous growths” of which the Rwala eat (Musil Rwala 95) or rogol (Atriplex leucoclada Boiss) a perennial of the class of plants called hamz which make the best camel pasture (Musil Rwala p. 337-338). The diagonal line which seems to join the ġ to the I is probably accidental.

I msg bn ʾmm bn Ṝsʾdʾl bn (b) ([[)]hm bn ʾmr

By Mgt son of ʾmm son of Ṝsʾdʾl son of (Bhm) son of ʾmr
Commentary:
The third name is clearly ns²dʾl. The first letter of the fourth name could be a k but it is not certain whether or not the stroke to the side is part of the letter. The author originally wrote the fourth name (b)m omitting the h. He then scratched over the m and wrote h above it and continued the text at the level of the h. It was this that led WH to divide it into two texts.

Commentary:
The very light line across the second letter is almost certainly natural. The fourth letter is clearly a b (cf. the b’s in the bn’s) so the third must be a r. Commentary:
There are some faint letters on the side of the stone immediately after the mf of the second mfny. WH omitted the m of the second mfny and their restoration [lm]ny is based on their reading of WH 953 where it is probably metathesis on the part of either the author or the copyist.

Although first letter of the fifth name is clearly ḫ on the copy the emendation seems justified not only because of the occurrence of Ysʾkr already in the genealogy but because names with pre-formative ḫ- are virtually unknown in Safaitic (the only example seems to be ḫ-myʾt in WH 154).

The same names are engraved three times in different techniques on the same face. WH treat them all as 2272. In the SD they are separated as WH 2272.1 2272.2 2272.3. Note in all three texts the difference between the lām auctoris which has a hook and the final letter which does not and which must therefore be a n even though in 2272.1 and 2272.2 it is somewhat longer than the n of the bn.

$l\ 'mz\ bn\ yt^*\ bn\ 'n[I]\ w\ 'dm'$

By $'mz$ son of $Yt^*$ son of $'n[I]$. He plaited [his hair]

Commentary:
WH take the first letter of the third name as $^$ and the last sign in the text as $g$ but on the copy they are of identical size. In view of WH 2321 it is likely that the third name should be read $'n[I]$ the last sign must therefore be $^$ also. A number of common names are occasionally found with a final $^*$ (e.g. qdm qdm$'$ in MST 1). Either the inscription is by two people or the $w$ should be emended to (bn).

WH 2637.2

---(s¹)d bn h[ʾ]r---

---(Sʾd) son of (Hʾr)---
Commentary:
It looks as though the lower part of the penultimate letter is in a different technique from the upper part. On the other hand it is identical to the h. One could read ʾ (taking both parts as intentional) or b (taking only the upper part). However there is a dear fork at the bottom which it makes it unlikely to be a k. There are traces of another letter on the edge of the break.

Commentary:
There is a lightly scratched t following the second t', but there is an unusually large space separating the two letters. The last part of the inscription has been badly damaged. The third to last letter could be an ʾ, but it is so close to the damaged portion, one could also interpret it as a damage mark.

{lḥ(l)m}

By {ḥ(l)m}

Commentary:
The author originally wrote ḥm. Upon realizing his error, he attempted to rub out the m and wrote an l over it. Four parallel lines, instead of the expected seven, follow the name, both of which are surrounded by a double line cartouche. Seven circles and a sun disk are to the right of the cartouche. A camel and a stick animal are also found on the same rock.

WH 2813

WH 2814

$l\, \text{tnyt} \ bnt \ hr(m) \ hyd \ f \ h \ lt \ rw\ h \ w \ s¹lm$

By $\text{tnyt}$ daughter of $\text{Hrm}$, a menstruating woman. 0 lt, [grant] relief and health.

Commentary:

WH read two letters wr immediately after the n of bnt and below the t and hr(m). If this is correct (and the letters are unidentifiable on the photograph) it seems probable that the author originally forgot the t of bnt and inadvertently close the left hand side of the h of hr(m) then noticing her mistake continued her text above. Note that the wr are in the direct natural line for the continuation of the text after bn.

By $\text{bd}$ son of $(\text{Y})$g of the (lineage of) Bs$¹$ and he and his brother were announced [commander] of a party of near kinsmen the year the Nabataeans rebelled against the people of (Rome), so may security come.

Apparatus Criticus:

MANC p. 421b: the year the Nabataeans rebelled against the people of Rome MNH p. 331 and n. 17: $s¹nt \ mrdt \ nb\ t \ 'l \ rm$ - the year of the revolt of the Nabataeans against the l Rm. MNBS 111 n. 68: $s¹nt \ mrdt \ nb\ t \ 'l \ rm$; on Knauf and texts mentioning conflicts between the Nabataeans and other peoples.

Commentary:

The f of mnfrt is clear and so Knauf’s suggestion m nmrt is impossible. The r of mnfrt is different from those of mrdt and rm which are completely closed. There does not seem to be a l between the f and the ’ at the end or between the ‘ and the s¹. The final f looks clear on the photograph and is followed by a deep hole in the rock.

$l\, 'mrt \ bn \ (g)\ (r) \ bn \ 'mt \ w \ r'\ y \ m\ dbr$

By ‘mrt son of $(\text{G})$r son of ‘mt and he pastured the inner desert.

Commentary:

The letters of the patronym have been altered by heavy scoring. The identification of the first is particularly uncertain. WH see a wasm (like a cross) at the end of the text.

WH 3049

By ʾrʿh son of Wʾd was here and he spent the dry season in the ḫarrān and he drove off (in a raid) the horses from the ḫawraṇ the year (or time) of a flood

Apparatus Criticus:
MST 9 n. 53: w qyz ḥrt w ṭrd m-ḥwrn h-ḥl s¹nt s¹l are probably not letters; p. 342 on raiding in ḫawraṇ from the ḫarrā.

Commentary:
The author wrote a t at the end of the first name and then neatly scratched it over. This could be a sign of the beginnings of uncertainty as to how represent /tāʾ marbʊta/ viz. by -t or by -h. Note also the /ḥwrn/ for the usual /ḥrn/ if this is what it is. There are definitely some very lightly scratched lines at the end of the text but whether they are letters reading s¹nt s¹l is somewhat doubtful.

Commentary:
The first two letters aligned with the third and are just visible on the photograph though they have been missed on the facsimile. The first two letters shown on the latter are in fact natural marks on the rock. The text has been heavily vandalised by the addition of lines to most of the letters. The third letter was probably a $`g$ which has been turned into a $s^\prime$ the two $`s$ have been truned into $w$'s a thicker horizontal stroke has been added across the top of the $n$ and a side-stroke added to the $d$.

Commentary:
There is a thinly scratched 'l before the lām auctoris which WH take with this text. However the technique is completely different and WH ignore the fact that there is a letter between their 'r' (in fact the lām auctoris) and the f. In the facsimile they combine these two letters into a f but the photograph shows this to be incorrect.

l zd n khy w bdr h- 'fmy m- ḫrn

By Zd son of Khy and he hastened towards the new growth, having become tired of the Ḥaurān

Apparatus Criticus:
MNH p. 341: w bdr h- 'f ml m- ḫrn - and he hastened towards the new growth having become tired of the Ḥawrān. WH’s translation; p. 342: on going from the Ḥawrān.

Commentary:
The central stroke of the fourth letter is identical in form to the rest of the letter but it is different from the ḫ of khy in that the central stroke does not project. It was presumably an error by the author for b. ḫ- 'fmy 'the Apamaean'??

WH 3373

l bʾmrh bn gd (ṣ)(b)yt

By Bʾmrh son of Gd are the (gazelles)

Commentary:
The loop of the d (though not shown on the facsimile) can be seen on the photograph. The first two letters of the last word have rather odd shapes. They appear to be continuing the 90° stance of the letters in the text with the ẓ which usually stands with its open side at the bottom turned so that the open side is to the right and the b (partially obscured by a large dot) has its open side more or less pointing upwards.

WH 3374

l h][]'d bn 'kyd

By (Hʾd) son of 'kyd

Commentary:
The author originally wrote a ' after the h then scratched it out and wrote'. This seems to have caused considerable confusion to previous editors. The ' is not shown on WH’s facsimile (though there is a space where it should be) but is it included in their reading. They also emend the ' to š although there is no justification for this since the ' is clear on the photograph. CSNS (p. 195) adds to the confusion by claiming that this š is a restoration rather than an emendation and that the facsimile (and the entry in HIn p. 605) show the name as hʾd whereas in fact both show it as hʾd! The second name is clearly 'kyd on the photograph though y and a d are more lightly scratched than the first two letters.

$l\text{dh}d t\text{bn}\text{s}^4\text{dr} \text{bkrt}$

By $\text{Dhd}t$ son of $\text{S}^4\text{dr}$ is the young she-camel

Commentary:
The last letter of the second name is certainly not $\text{y}$. It could be a $\text{r}$ or if the small stroke to the right is intentional a $\text{k}$ but it does not resemble the $\text{r}$ or the $\text{k}$ in $\text{bkrt}$. The ‘ seems to be clear despite a small spot over part of the lower side stroke

Apparatus Criticus:
MNH p. 383 n. 481: on expressions used as grave-markers.

Commentary:
The first name cannot be ‘$\text{m}$ or ‘$\text{rbs}$ (Jamme) because that would require a small recatangular $\text{r}$ whereas the $\text{r}$ of $\text{rgm}$ (like those in the previous text) is a straight line with a hook at one end. That the third letter is a square $\text{g}$ is confirmed by the other $\text{g}$’s in the text.

WH 3531

--- bn {{y}}s¹lm {{b}}{{n}}) h --- g

--- son of {ys¹lm} (son of) H --- G

Commentary:
WH read this as the continuation of 3532 but this is very unlikely since the latter is enclosed in a cartouche. The beginning of 3531 is hidden under earth and a stone. The text has been extensively altered. It seems likely that the upper circle of the third visible latter was added later. Unlike the lower one it has been drawn around the bottom of the stem rather than added onto its end. It therefore seems likely that the letter was originally a y. The next letter is a s¹ with a very lightly scratched line near it. WH took this a part of the letter and read it as h. The l and m of ys¹lm are clear. The shape of the following sign is suspicious with its flattened right-hand edge and it seems likely that it is a bn the letters of which have been joined and then a cross stroke added to make it into a w. The following sign is 90° h with the bottom crossed by the line of the cartouche around 3532 and the final sign is clearly a g rather than two l’s. What is between the h and g is unclear on the photograph.

_l qtl bn ṭrq_

By Qtl son of ṭrq

Commentary:
WH read WH 3531 as a continuation of this text. However 3532 is clearly enclosed in a cartouche and ends with ṭrq. What WH read as the lām auctoris is an extraneous line outside the cartouche and what they take to be the left-hand side of the ‘m’ is in fact the end of the cartouche the right-hand side of the ‘m’ being the true lām auctoris. The r of ṭrq has small but clear hooks though these are not shown on the facsimile. All this can be seen on the photograph.

By Mlkt (son of) Ḫy son of Ḫl is

Commentary:
The text has been much altered and the only the first name is certain. The seventh eighth and ninth letters are obscured by over-scratchings. The fourteenth letter seems to have been altered from a h to a ʾ by the addition of an extra heavier side-stroke. The next sign seems originally to have been a hooked l like that in mlkt but a heavy circle has been added at the other end of the stem and a lighter line joining the end of the hook back to the stem. By contrast the penultimate sign seems to have started off a h but the side strike was then scratched over to make it look like a r. However none of this can be certain.

l ḥrb (b)n <<>>'ll w tṣr h- s'my b- ḥḍr w wrd brkt

By Ḥrb son of yʿll and he awaited the rains while camping by permanent water and he had gone to water at Brkt.

Apparatus Criticus:
NAEN I p. 29 38 n. 55: w tṣr h- s'my b- ḥḍr w wrd brkt - " and he waited for rains at a ḫādir (i.e. a place by permanent water) and he watered at Brkt ". MST p. 9 n. 55: as NAEN I.

Commentary:
The text has been tampered with. A horizontal has been added between two of the prongs of the h. The b of bn has been turned into a m but the additional line is in a quite different technique to the original. An extra y has been added just before yʿll in the same technique as the addition to the b. The letters l wbr above a drawing of an unidentifiable animal in the area surrounded by the inscription clearly do not belong to the text though WH read them at the end of it.

l bhl bn ‘lz(‘) h· dr ’m f’m

By Bhl son of {ʾlz} was here year after year

Commentary:
The first fourth and eighth letters are identical very shallow curves and it is likely therefore that all three are l’s. There is no trace of WH’s supposed ‘(‘) after the z but there is a faint circle which could be a ’. On WHs facsimile the text continues (as read above) after the second name though this is virtually invisible on the photograph and is ignored in WHs reading of this text.

Drawing only. NB most of the signs in the grid could be read as Safaitic letters but despite the attempts of HIn (ʾṭy p. 54) and JRWH (ḥġysʾr p. 510 read) to read them (as WH 3790a) it seems likely that they have magic significance and are intended to be read separately rather consecutively.

l dʾ(y) bn bsʾ bn ʾsʾd bn gmr bn ḫsʾn bn ḫbk

By (Dʾy) son of Bsʾ son of ʾsʾd son of Gmr son of ḫsʾn son of ḫbk

Commentary:
WH have taken no account of the relative positions of the texts on the rock nor of the differences in technique which characterise them. WH 3807 is lightly scratched and after the fourth bn crosses a break in the rock. The last two names of this text are separated from the other texts on this second piece of rock by a thickly hammered enclosing-line. WH read two of the names (ʾmq bn gmr) from 3809 as the end of 3807 despite the fact that they are incised rather than scratched and are not aligned with the rest of 3807. They then combined the last two names of 3807 (ʾhsʾn bn ḫbk) with the end of 3809 (bn ḫbk bn ʾmt bn ḫsʾn) to make a new text ʿ3897b. See the commentary to WH 3809.

By ḍ bn son of ḍ bn son of ḏbn ḍ bn son of ḏbn ḏ bn son of ḏn

Commentary:
Several letters in the first two names have been vandalised by the addition of lines and the filling in of spaces as can be seen on the photograph where the additions have a different 'texture' to the original letters. The second sign was almost certainly a r but the small hook at each end has been enlarged into a circle making the letter resemble a ṣ. The fifth sign was originally a ṭāmān to which hooks were later added making it resemble a r. These hooks do not quite join the vertical. The second name has been rendered unintelligible. The first letter was originally a ṣ like that of the first name but its small hooks have been joined by a vertical line giving the appearance of a g or m. The next sign which has been made to resemble a curious ṣ was originally a bn where one end of the n was very close to one arm of the b. Whoever altered the inscription completely the join and made small extensions to the other ends of the n and b. He also joined the n of the following bn to the b of bs¹. The b and the n of the bn after bs¹ have been joined and an extra line added to form what WH took to be a wasm. The text continues across the crack but the letters here are incised rather than chiselled. The first name after the crack has been very skilfully altered. One fork of the 'hs' has been joined to make a ṣ. The following letter was originally a s¹ (the firmer semi-circle with a short line protruding from it) but has been turned into a m by the addition of a lighter outer semi-circle. Finally the d has been changed into a q by the addition of a loop on the right side of the stem. Note that the family tree on p. 302 of CSNS should be amended to take account of these corrected readings. The genealogy in this text seems to differ from that in 3807 which runs dʾ(y) bn bs¹ bn ḏbn ḏ bn ḏs¹n bn ḏbk.

Commentary:
The letters are shown as clear on the copy but on the photograph it can be seen that they are badly hammered over to the extent that the lām auctoris and the first name form an indecipherable mess. It seems unlikely that the mark which WH take as an ‘ is in fact intentional. The rest of the text has been ligatured but the letters are distinguishable.

By S¹r(b)t son of G’wn son of Tmn

Commentary:
WH read this text as the continuation of 3901. However it is clear from the photograph that they are two separate inscriptions The beginning of 3902 is obscured by a patch of abrasion and the letters of the first name are therefore very faint and the reading is not entirely certain. There is a line above the third letter of the name which in some lights make it look like a s¹ but on the rock when it was copied this looked like an extraneous mark above a b. Similarly on some photographs the final letter of the first name looks like a k or a h, whereas on the rock it appeared as a clear t.

Apparatus Criticus:

WH: 'byt for 'byt'

Commentary:

The text has been very thoroughly obscured by ligatures and hammering and only the first and the last two letters are certain. What may be the ‘ of the first name can be seen between the t and the b, though this may simply be a ligature. It seems that the two arms of the b have been joined and a line hammered between it and the following n. There seems to be another area of hammering between the n and the f. The latter could also be a s².

lʾḥṣ²dy bn nybt

By ṣ²dy son of Nybt

Apparatus Criticus:
WH read the first three letters as WH 3908, reading lʾḥṣ, the s being the upper part of the s².

Commentary:
WH 3908 and 3909 were written by brothers who used the close similarity of their names to write a joint inscription, in which they shared the last two letters of their names plus the bn and their father’s name (bn nybt). Ḵṣ²dy has not been found before in Safaitic, though compare the Arabic name Ḫāṣid (Caskel 1966:...
321a). It is a common custom among the Bedouin today to give their children rhyming or closely similar names, as here.

By {----mr} son of {Bhrs³h} are the drawings

Apparatus Criticus:
WH: l 'mr bn 'dn h- dmy"By 'mr son of 'dn the Hdmite"

Commentary:
It is clear from the fact that WH cite one of their own photographs, rather than one of Park's, that this stone is not from Jabal Qurna, which they never visited. It is probably from the immediate vicinity of Qasr Burq' whence it was brought to the Amman Museum with other stones from the same area by Professor George Mendenhall in the early 1980s. The diagonal part of the inscription has been scratched over and the arrow of the archer to the right of it enters the crescent of the m (the firmer line below it cannot be the arrow because it is too low in relation to the bow). The scratches and other damage make it extremely difficult to read this section of the text. In Macdonald 1980: 197 it is suggested that dmy here (as in AbaNS 8, 32, and 44) could be a plural of dmyt, comparable to Classical Arabic dumān (see Lane 917b). An alternative explanation would be that the author was from the oasis of Dūmah (modern al-Ǧawf) and that h- dmy is his nisbah, as suggested by Ahmad Al-jallad in KRS 30. For a comment on the drawing see Macdonald 1993: 328, n. 160. For the presence of the women drawing out their hair see Macdonald 2012: 284.

Commentary:

Several letters have been tampered with. It looks as though the second and third letters of the first name have been changed from $l\,y$ into $r\,\breve{a}$. The $b$'s of both $b\,m\,s$ have been made to look like $s\,^{\prime}$ and the $b$ and $n$ of the first $b\,m$ have been joined together while the $n$ of the second has been turned into $a\,t$. The $g$ has been almost entirely obliterated while the last two letters seem to have been turned from $g\,y$ into $w\,d$

l ʾhm w ḏbʾ l- nbṭ

By ʾhm and he took refuge with the Nabataeans

Apparatus Criticus:

WH: w ḏbʾ l- nbṭ “and he was on a raid to the Nabataeans”

Commentary:

It seems that ḏbʾ without l- almost certainly means “to raid”, since on several occasions it is followed by a prayer for booty (e.g. HaNSB 365, KRS 269, ThSaT 56, WH 2818, 3731, etc.) and in KRS 33 the author says w ḏbʾ w ḡmn “and he raided and took booty”. However, ḏbʾ followed by l- is never associated with references to “booty and it seems that it is more likely to mean “he sought refuge with”, as in Classical Arabic ḏab’aʾ ilā (Lane 1763a), as suggested in Macdonald 1993: 314, n. 72.

WH: yṯʾrḥ yṯʾr "he was watching animals"
Commentary:
The first two letters of the second name are clearly ġ l which have been joined at one end and in the middle by a later line which also joins the l to the ġ. The name is unattested but compare Classical Arabic ġālīṯ “one who fights vehemently” (Lane p. 2281b under ġālīṯ). The name could also be ġlīt (compare Classical Arabic galīt “a bitter herb with which one tans” Lane p. 2281b) however given the lack of a connective between the name and the statement it seems more likely that the y belongs to the following verb which would be a circumstance clause (ḥāl) “while he was waiting for some animals”.

By Khs'mn son of Grm'I son of {B'htn} and 'l Ty' passed by journeying on camels and travelling by night on mules (b)d sheep

Commentary:
WRA 1 to 21 are on one large rock. For mrq see Al-Jallad 2015: 328. For s'fr compare Arabic safara "he went forth on a journey" (Lane 1370b) and for 's'ry compare Classical Arabic asāra = surā meaning "he travelled by night" (Lane 1355a–b). On the interpretation of 'r and 'yr as horse-donkey hybrids (mules or hinnies) see Macdonald (in press, a). Unfortunately, we are unable to offer an interpretation for the b or l d before the word d'n.

Commentary:
King (1990: 680) considers that the third letter from the end is a ḏ rather than a m. In the copy can be read a m clearly. Since the text is mixed Safaitic/Hismaic and the personal name ṣmrṭ is common in Safaitic, we should reject King's reading. The Winnett & Reed's interpretation (1970: 85) comparing ṣmrṭ to the Arabic maraṭa "to pluck out hair" seems more plausible.

Commentary:
There appears to be a small loop after the initial l which might be an ʾ although the technique of inscribing seems to be rather different from that of the other lines of the text. There is then a line which might be a l and then there is a hammer mark just before the m which might cover another letter. The letter read as the first sʾ is rather curved and the second one read as a sʾ is angular with one line shorter than the other. The final letter is more likely to be a l than a b.

ZeWA 1: “ṭsʾ{m}” for “ṭsʾ{m}”; “ʾmrk” for “ʾmrk”; “ʾzʾm” for “ʾzʾm” trans. “w qad atā fī ḥadāʾ-l-makān muṣqīman fī as-sanātī allattī ʾašāba fīḥā mālīk malīk al-ʾanbāṭī ʿalāṭīn mīʾah qāṭīl lil-mān wā ṭarada ṭmr lil-zʾ{m} [fayā] ʿbd drwʾd ṭw yāʾ ʿayyūṭā ṭllāt ṭw yāʾ sʾḥqm al-ʾṭlānī ṭw-s ṭlāmāḥī ṭl- ṭm yūrāqibu ṭw-l ʾgānāmah ʿl- ṭlāf ṭrụṭku ḥadāʾ-l-ḥatṭa salīman”

Commentary:
The m of the lineal name is in complete in the copy and the m after the word “ḍr” is a loop shape different from the other m’s of the text. the letter z is very small and squeezed in between the two adjacent letters. The following letter which has been read as an’ is quite a lot larger than the other “s” of the text and it is possible it should be read as a g. the above translation is MCAM’s.

Iṣʾlm bn ṭq(d)ʾl h-bkrt

By Iṣʾlm son of (Ṭq(ḍ)ʾl) is the young she-camel

Commentary:
The text is written round three sides of a drawing of a camel. The second name is very odd if the reading is correct. The root RQD in Classical Arabic means ‘to sleep’ or ‘to be ragged’ neither very suitable for a theophoric name. The first two letters are certain (cf. the minimal circle on the q in ZF 13) but the loop of the d is more lightly incised than the rest of the letter. The l has become joined to the rear foot of the camel. The d-l could represent s¹ or even ḍ but the roots RQS and RQḌ do not seem to exist.

l s²gt bn s²d bn s²[h]r w w[g]jm l- ’nʾm w l- ’m-h w l- šḥrt w l- bnt ’ḥ-h s¹byt

By S²gt son of S²d son of S²hr and he grieved for ’nʾm and for his mother and for šḥrt and for his brother daughter S¹byt/ prisoner

Commentary:
ZN 8 and 9 are on the same face, most of which is taken up by 8, with 9 squeezed in along one edge, in small scratched letters. This text begins in chiselled letters and then changes to incised. Note that his niece appears to have been held captive (s¹byt)

l ’nʾ[++]m bn gdn bn s¹lmy bn bqlt bn ’lg bn ḥdr bn qn bn gmmn bn kmy bn ’mrt bn ’tq bn ḏr

By (’nʾ) son of Gdn son of S¹lmy son of Bqlt son of ’lg son of ḥdr son of Qn son of Gmmn son of Kmy son of ’mrt son of ’tq son of ḏr

Commentary:
Note that ṛ has only one hook, that ḥ, ḥ have long stems and very small forks, and that ḥ is a very small dot, whereas ḡ is an elongated oval. K has a square form. The first 3 names are in the 90° script. There is a 9-rayed star and 7 lines above the beginning of the text. There is a symbol of 7 ”�”-like signs forming a star within the m of the first name and there are 8-rayed stars in the b of the first bn and the m of the 3rd name. There are two stars (the left 7-rayed, the right 6-rayed) above bn ḥdr and 6- or 7-rayed star below the same bn. There is another symbol of 7 ”�”-signs between the first m of gmmn and the k of kmy and a curious ”L”-shaped line in the bn immediately after kmy. Finally, there are apparently stray marks in the ḡ and the first m of gmmn.

Provenance:
Unspecified site, unspecified region, unspecified country.

By ḍbb son of ḏn

Commentary:
On the same rock as ZRE.C 3, in the background of SESP.C 95:337. Chiselled letters. The third and fourth letters are significantly more square than the b’s of the two bn’s. They could be r’s, but they would be more like the Hismaic than the Safaitic forms.

Commentary:
On the rock same rock as ZRE.C 2, in the background of SESP.C 95:337. Small chiselled letters, boustrophedon. The r of ḥr is dear. Presumably it means “and he returned [to] this place alone” but one would expect li or īlā.
